Fair Time Enforcement

(PALMER, Alaska) – It's fair time in Southcentral Alaska. As people from all over the state flock to Palmer to explore the Alaska State Fair, the Alaska State Troopers will conduct high visibility and focused traffic enforcement on the highways and roadways in and around the Mat-Su Valley. The Palmer Patrol Troopers, Bureau of Highway Patrol Troopers and troopers from other units within the Department Of Public Safety will be out on the roads doing their best to keep Alaskans safe as they head to the fair grounds. Troopers will be out in both marked and unmarked patrol vehicles for the duration of the fair, which starts tomorrow and runs through Sept. 1.

The Alaska State Troopers encourage motorists to keep safety the top priority no matter where they are headed. Be sure to obey the Move Over law, slow down and give emergency vehicles plenty of room as you pass. Troopers will be giving children that are properly buckled a coupon for a free cookie from any Holiday Stationstores in Alaska.
