The City of Seward is recruiting for a full-time police officer. This position works under the direction and supervision of the Chief of Police and other department supervisors. The position is responsible for general police duties, enforcement of local, state, and federal laws, and the protection of life and property. We are looking for officers with a desire to serve their communities by being respectful, kind, and always mindful of the rights of others while being firm and equal when enforcing the law.

Seward is a smaller Alaskan community with a year-round population of around 2,800 people with an increase during the summer months of workers in the tourism and fishing industries. Seward is a great place for officers who are looking for a community where they can know everyone and be known by everyone. The department actively takes part in community events, hosting several themselves, and tries to add more events all the time. The police department is well supported by the community, and this is a town where an officer can rely on the citizens to help them in times of need. Overall, Seward is an extremely safe environment to be a police officer which allows us to be the public servants and guardians to our community we are supposed to be.

The area around Seward boasts incredible natural beauty with the town being ringed in by mountains that come right down to the waters of Resurrection Bay. The waters of the bay team with salmon, halibut, cod, and other sport fish opportunities. Bear, moose, and other wildlife are found here in abundance. The area offers many hiking trails, camping locations, saltwater and freshwater fishing, hunting, photography, and other opportunities to keep people busy.
