

- Skin (epithelial) cells are potentially relevant in most types of crimes. The laboratory does not screen for epithelial DNA. Samples are typically collected by swabbing an item and sending the swab on for DNA analysis. Items sampled vary from swabs from an individual's body where forceful skin to skin contact between individuals may have occurred, to swabs of items thought to be handled extensively by an individual.

Skin Cell Evidence

---