Yes, the Girdwood instrument ended up with two VOCs. When I installed the nalco bottle in the replacement instrument and turned on the power it immediately went into VOC mode before I could input the bottle S/N and expiration date. I then did a second VOC after to input the bottle S/N and expiration date.

I noticed that you have two VOC's and 1 tank change record for the install of the new girdwood instrument. I am assuming that you put the tank in prior to turning the instrument on and ran a VOC for the first one and then realized the lot number was incorrect and did the tank change to correct it. Is that what happened. If it is can you verify that the lot number on the first VOC should have been the same as the lot on the second VOC and I will line correct it on that VOC before we sign it.
