The statistics are startling.

- Each victim of violence deserves to be treated with dignity and respect, and to have evidence of the crimes committed against them preserved for future prosecution.
- Unfortunately, many areas of the state lack the ability to document and collect medical evidence to help protect victims of crime.
- Forensic evidence collection requires the necessary knowledge, skills, and abilities to do so from the onset of patient care.
- ACFTA offers nurses and health care professionals across the state training to ensure trauma informed care for victims of violence which will ultimately promote justice for all victims in Alaska.

75% of Alaskans have experienced or know someone who has experienced domestic violence or sexual assault.

An assault in Alaska occurs every hour.

Alaska's rate of child mistreatment is 69.3% higher than the national average.

The Alaska rate for Elder physical abuse is 2.4 times the national rate. Elder psychological abuse is 1.6 times higher than the national rate.
